Passage #1

In college study, students have vast (21) _____ of reading for every course. (22) _____ your only strategy is to read everything slowly, one word at a time, you will never succeed because the process will take too long. It is (23) _____ crucial to develop strategies to improve reading speed so you can find the main points quickly. Many people agree that the most effective strategy for increasing reading speed is to avoid reading every word. If you just want to know (24) _____ a text is worth reading in more detail, you can survey the text by reading the general information such as the author, title, introduction, etc. This process of getting an overview is called skimming. If you only need to know the main ideas, you can skim the text. (25) _____, if you want to find specific information, you can scan or search the text for key words or phrases.

Passage #2

To improve your reading speed, it is important to identify your purpose before reading. In other words, knowing (26) _____ you are reading will determine (27) _____ you should read (e.g. to skim, scan, or read carefully), as well as (28) _____ parts of the text may be useful. Understanding your purpose helps you prioritize your reading. In reading, it is important to remember that not all words are equally important and, to improve your speed, you need to know which words or phrases are important. A final skill which is (29) _____ to increase speed is guessing unknown words in the text: if you stop to look up every word you do not know, it will take too much time and you may never finish. Instead, you should try to guess new words by looking at the (30) _____ such as the information before or after this unknown word.
